Identify Risk

AUO implementation complies with international human rights laws and RBA (Responsible Business Alliance) guidelines. We conduct assessments and take measures to address human rights issues. We actively engage with employees, subsidiaries, joint ventures, Tier-1 suppliers, outsourcers, contractors, and neighboring communities, among other stakeholders, to collectively promote and protect human rights. Through interviews, human rights risk assessment surveys, RBA audits, etc., AUO grasps the stakeholders' concerns and responses to human rights risk issues in order to provide resources and assistance in terms of advocacy, Trainings for all employees on discrimination or harassment in the workplace, seminars, and other aspects of human rights governance.

Occupational Safety	Prohibition of Forced Labor
Freedom of Employment	Non-discrimination, Diversity and Inclusion
Freedom of Speech and Expression	Right to Family Life

Stakeholder Risk Assessment

To comprehensively understand and manage human rights issues, AUO conducts human rights risk assessments on stakeholders. In order to identify, prevent, and reduce the impact of human rights risks on AUO, its supply chain, and other stakeholders, a “Risk Assessment Framework” has been developed based on the RBA Code of Conduct guidelines. Suppliers are required to sign written commitments and management assurances, committing to strict adherence to and shared social responsibility. AUO has also formulated management standards for suppliers according to RBA guidelines.

AUO conducts stakeholder assessments on human rights issues. Our 2023 survey expanded beyond all employees to include risk identification for business relationships and Group subsidiaries were also incorporated into the scope of risk assessment. We also used the AUO RBA audit scope as a reference to include subsidiaries, joint venture, Tier-1 suppliers, outsourcers and contractors. Local communities were added as they may be directly affected by the production operations. In addition to the 12 human rights issues of concern to the industry, AUO wanted to take all of the potential derivative issues into account as well. Stakeholders were invited by AUO to fill out the human rights risk assessment survey and 591 responses were collected in 2023. In addition to the survey results, we also conducted a total risk assessment and analysis based on the findings of internal/external RBA audits, compliance with labor legislation, and internal complaints mechanisms. AUO’s risk calculations for material topics was used to identify the degree of risk for each human rights issue based on the two dimensions of “Likelihood” and “Scale/Scope of Impact.” All issues of concern were found to offer no material risks. Planning was subsequently carried out for prevention of secondary risks to mitigate or prevent the production of human rights risks and hazards during operations.

Basis for Human Rights Risk Analysis: >>

- ✓ Results of human rights risk assessment questionnaire.
- ✓ Compliance with labor laws.
- ✓ RBA audit management standards and internal/external audit results.
- ✓ Internal complaint mechanism.
- ✓ Regular stakeholder interviews.

Stakeholder Risk Matrix: >>

Assessing individual stakeholder risks based on the "likelihood of occurrence" and "impact scale/scope" in the context of human rights issues.

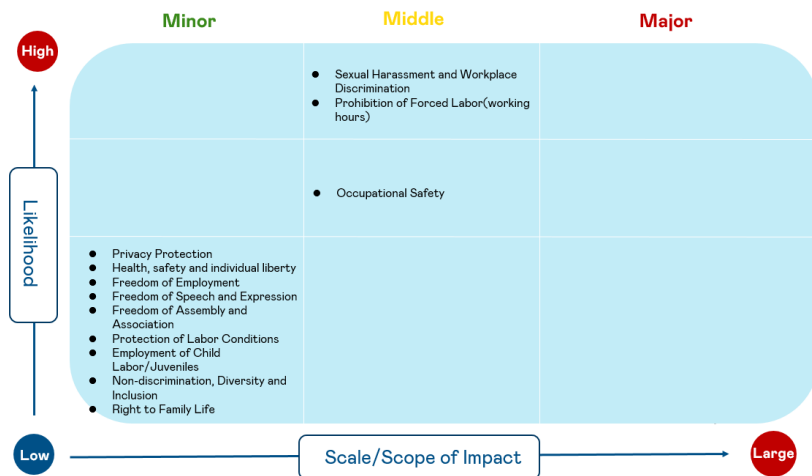

Likelihood

- High likelihood of occurrence: More than once a year (3 points)
- Medium likelihood of occurrence: More than once every 3 years (2 points)
- Low likelihood of occurrence: More than once every 10 years (1 point)

Scale/Scope of Impact

- Scale: Determine based on the duration and intensity of the impact on stakeholders' benefits related to the issue.
- Scope: Determine based on the size of the affected region and the number of people impacted.

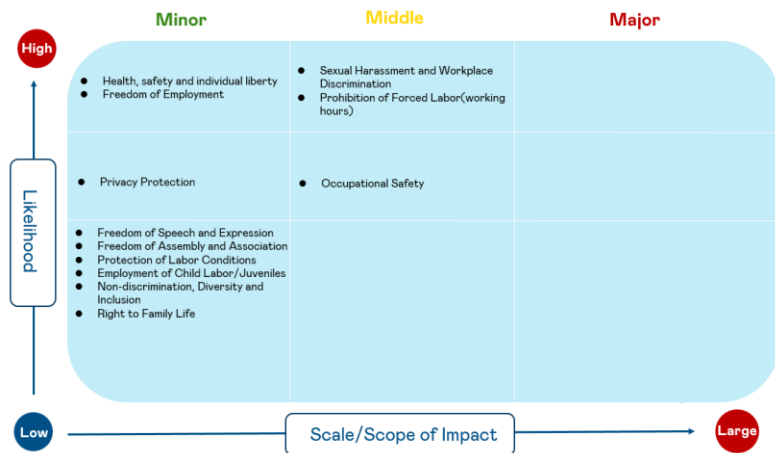

➤ Employees

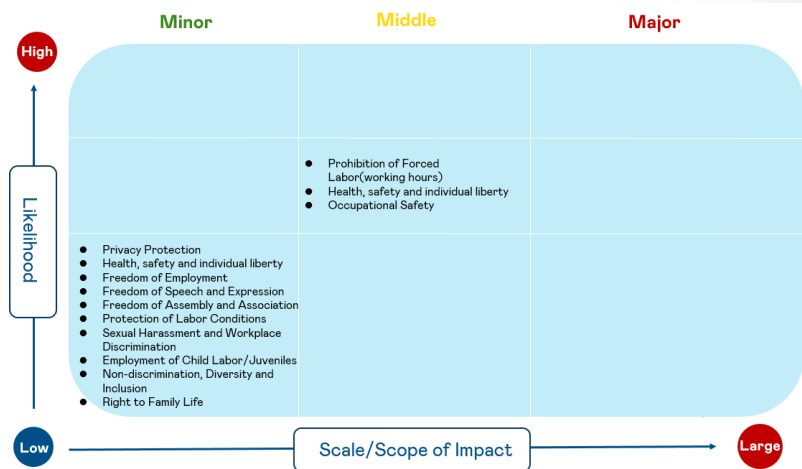

➤ Subsidiaries, Joint ventures

➤ Tier-1 suppliers

➤ Outsourcers, Contractors

➤ Neighboring communities

Preventive Measures

Based on the stakeholder risk matrix results, AUO implemented preventive measures, risk communication, and educational training in 2024 for 3 minor risks: "Workplace misconduct and sexual harassment" and "Forced labor - working hours, occupational safety." Within the company, preventive measures were taken to prevent human rights risk events through the guidance of relevant policies, clearly defined complaint procedures, and processing protocols. For the supply chain, AUO strengthened human rights protection and implemented measures such as advocacy, training, and audits based on the RBA standard.

The freedom and confidentiality of employee feedback are also assured through the strictest possible personal information protection regulations and the "AUO Personal Information Protection Management Regulations." Labor-management meetings are regularly convened as well to guarantee employees' right to organize and collective bargaining. We promote healthy and constructive labor-management relations. To reduce the business impact of human rights risks on AUO, the supply chain, and our partners, AUO will conduct risk assessments based on the 12 key human rights issues of concern and establish appropriate risk mitigation and compensation measures. Preventive measures and improvement plans are formulated based on the degree of risk for each issue with regular follow-ups on implementation outcomes. If a human rights violation takes place, AUO employees will engage in arbitration and negotiation in accordance with internal procedures. Corrective or disciplinary action will also be taken in accordance with the work rules in case of discriminatory or harassment. Suppliers, contractors, and outsourcing businesses may have their contract/collaboration suspended or terminated. Punitive fines for breach of contract may also be imposed. In the future, AUO will maintain open channels of communication with stakeholders. We will require our supply chain and partners to follow the rules and work together to set the highest standard in human rights governance.
